'HOW DARE YOU'

Days after galvanizing 4 million people around the globe to march for action against climate change, 16-year-old Swedish activist Greta Thunberg admonished a roomful of world leaders at the United Nations Monday for not acting sooner. 2

Teen Thunberg to UN climate summit: 'You have stolen my dreams'

Climate activist blamed the adults in the room for burdening her generation.

Teenage climate change activist Greta Thunberg on Monday opened the United Nations Climate Action Summit with an angry condemnation of world leaders for failing to take strong measures to combat climate change. "How dare you," she said.

Days after millions of young people took to the streets worldwide to demand emergency action on climate change, leaders gathered for the annual United Nations General Assembly aiming to inject fresh momentum into stalling efforts to curb carbon emissions.

A visibly emotional Thunberg, 16, said in stern remarks at the opening of the summit that the generations that have polluted the most have burdened her and her generation with the extreme impacts of climate change.

"This is all wrong. I shouldn't be up here. I should be back in school on the other side of the ocean yet you all come to us young people for hope. How dare you," said the Swedish teenager, her voice quivering.

"You have stolen my dreams and my childhood with your empty words," Thunberg said, adding that the plans that leaders will unveil will not be enough to respond to the rate of the planet's warming.

Thunberg has galvanized a new wave of climate change activism through her weekly Fridays for Future school strikes, which she began with her solitary protests outside of the Swedish parliament.

U.N. Secretary-General Antonio Guterres had warned governments ahead of the event that they would have to offer action plans to qualify to speak at the summit, which is aimed at boosting the 2015 Paris Agreement to combat global warming.

In his opening remarks, he tried to capture the urgency of climate change and called out the fossil fuel industry.

"Nature is angry. And we fool ourselves if we think we can fool nature, because nature ... is striking back with fury," Guterres said.

"There is a cost to everything. But the biggest cost is doing nothing. The biggest cost is subsidising a dying fossil fuel industry, building more and more coal plants, and denying what is plain as day: that we are in a deep climate hole, and to get out we must first stop digging," he said.

French President Emmanuel Macron.

TRUMP APPEARS

U.S. President Donald Trump, a climate change denier who has undone every major U.S. regulation aimed at combating climate change, made a brief appearance in the audience of the summit along with Vice President Mike Pence and Secretary of State Mike Pompeo. He did not give remarks but listened to remarks by German Chancellor Angela Merkel and Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi.

Former New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg, who serves as the U.N. special envoy on climate action, called out Trump's stealth appearance before he spoke on Monday: "Hopefully our deliberations will be helpful to you as you formulate climate policy," he said to audience laughter.

Merkel announced Germany would double its contribution to a U.N. fund to support less developed countries to combat climate change to 4 billion euros from 2 billion euros.

In a measure of the gap between government action and the ever-louder alarms sounded by climate scientists, the U.N. Development Programme said that 14 nations representing a quarter of global emissions have signaled that they do not intend to revise current climate plans by 2020. REUTERS

Emmys: US TV audience at lowest-ever level: Nielsen

2 The U.S. television audience for the Emmy Awards show, celebrating the best of television, slumped to 6.9 million viewers, its lowest-ever level, according to Nielsen ratings data on Monday. The audience dropped by more than 32 percent from last year's ceremony, which at the time was a record low of 10.2 million U.S. viewers. The Emmy Awards, broadcast live on Fox on Sunday, awarded its highest honors to medieval fantasy drama and fan favorite "Game of Thrones" and quirky British comedy "Fleabag." The three-hour ceremony in L.A. was broadcast without a host against stiff competition from "Sunday Night Football" on NBC. Major award shows have been losing ground with the public in recent years, although the Oscars in February, which featured performances by Queen and Lady Gaga, bucked the trend by rising some 10 percent to 29.6 million U.S. viewers. Boeing to pay 737 victims' families $144.5k each

3 Boeing Co.'s $50 million financial assistance fund will pay the families of 346 people killed in two fatal 737 MAX crashes $144,500 each, the fund's administrators said on Monday. The fund, which is overseen by Washington lawyers Ken Feinberg and Camille S. Biros and was announced in July, will begin accepting claims from family members immediately. Family members will not be required to waive or release the right to litigate as a condition of participation. The 737 MAX has been grounded since March after fatal crashes in Ethiopia and Indonesia. "We continue to extend our deepest sympathies to the families and loved ones of all those on board," said Boeing CEO Dennis Muilenburg in a statement. "The opening of this fund is an important step in our efforts to help affected families." REUTERS

Oprah relaunches book club on streaming Apple TV

4 Oprah Winfrey on Monday announced the first pick of her revamped popular book club with Apple's new television streaming service but made clear she had no plans to return to hosting a regular TV talk show. Winfrey, one of the most influential women in U.S. television, chose "The Water Dancer" by critically acclaimed author Ta-Nehisi Coates, his debut novel about slavery. "It is one of the best books I have ever read in my entire life," Winfrey said on CBS "This Morning." The inaugural "Oprah's Book Club" will premiere on Apple TV+ on Nov. 1. Winfrey said the new book club venture would feature interviews with authors from Apple stores in world cities. Winfrey, however, ruled out any return to the kind of daily show that she ended in 2011 after 25 years. "I'm kinda done with the talk show," she told DeGeneres. REUTERS

Trump says he's not taking talk of impeachment over Ukraine call seriously

Democrats outraged president may have sought election help from outside U.S.

U.S. President Donald Trump on Monday shrugged off talk about impeachment over reports that he had asked his Ukrainian counterpart to launch an investigation that could damage Democratic political rival Joe Biden.

Asked how seriously he was taking the threat of impeachment by Congress, Trump said, "Not at all seriously."

On Sunday, Trump acknowledged that he discussed Democratic presidential hopeful Biden and his son in a July 25 call with Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky.

The Wall Street Journal and the New York Times on Friday said Trump repeatedly asked the Ukrainian leader in the call to investigate the involvement of Biden's son, Hunter, with a Ukrainian energy company. He also asked Zelensky to work with his personal lawyer, Rudy Giuliani, who had been urging Ukrainian officials to investigate Joe Biden and his family.

As he arrived at the United Nations for the General Assembly on Monday, Trump told reporters: "We had a perfect phone call with the president of Ukraine. Everybody knows it. It's just a Democrat witch hunt."

Trump did not provide evidence the allegations were politically motivated. Media reports about the phone call stemmed from a classified whistleblower report from the U.S. intelligence community.

The call has sparked a political battle between Democrats warning of a national security threat and Republicans turning it into an attack on former vice president Biden, a front-runner in the field of Democrats seeking to challenge Trump in the 2020 presidential election.

Democrats are outraged that Trump may have sought help in the election from a foreign country, especially after Special Counsel Robert Mueller concluded Russia waged a widespread influence and propaganda campaign to help Trump win in 2016.

IMPEACHMENT OR NOT?

"He thinks he can get away with it. The president thinks he can act with impunity," Democratic Sen. Chris Murphy said at a news conference in Hartford, Connecticut.

> "The president thinks he can act with impunity."
> Sen. Chris Murphy

The Democratic leader of a key congressional panel said on Sunday the pursuit of Trump's impeachment may be the "only remedy" to the situation.

However, it is far from clear whether there is enough support for Democrats in the House of Representative to launch impeachment proceedings. Any such effort would face a hurdle getting through the Republican-led Senate.

The media reports about the phone call also said Trump repeatedly asked Zelensky to investigate whether Biden misused his position as vice president under former President Barack Obama to threaten to withhold U.S. aid unless a prosecutor who was looking into the gas company in which Biden's son was involved was fired. BRIEF

Hundreds of thousands stranded after travel firm Thomas Cook collapses

Hundreds of thousands of holidaymakers were stranded on Monday by the collapse of the world's oldest travel firm Thomas Cook, sparking the largest peacetime repatriation effort in British history.

The liquidation marks the end of a British company that started in 1841 running local rail excursions and grew to pioneer the family package holiday.

Running hotels, resorts and airlines for 19 million people a year, it has around 600,000 people abroad and will need the help of governments and insurance firms to bring them home from places as far afield as Cancun, Cuba and Cyprus.

Thomas Cook's demise, announced in the early hours of Monday after it failed to secure a deal with creditors or a government bailout, sparked alarm at hotels where some customers have been asked to pay their bills anew by out-of-pocket resort owners.

As well as its 21,000 employees, the company's fall hit global booking websites, credit card companies, travel firms using its airlines and British high streets where its travel agents were forced to shut. Major holiday destinations including Turkey and Greece also warned their hoteliers would suffer. REUTERS

Sterling K. Brown on 'This Is Us,' his busy year, and making people cry in the street

The actor tells us about all of his projects ahead of tonight's premiere of "This Is Us" on NBC.

PAT KING

At this point, it almost seems like a given that Sterling K. Brown is going to have a pretty busy release schedule. The actor has been working at a reliable pace in theater, television and film since the early 2000s, but ever since he made his big splash with his award-winning performance in Ryan Murphy's "The People v. O.J. Simpson" and with the massive success of the NBC ratings juggernaut and critical darling "This Is Us," life has changed in a much more noticeable way for the actor.

"This Is Us" will be returning tonight with an extended premiere event. But this fall, fans will be able to see Brown in a myriad of different high-profile projects including a role in the highly anticipated "Frozen 2"; alongside Blake Lively and Jude Law in "The Rhythm Section"; as a cast member in the Amazon Prime hit "The Marvelous Mrs. Maisel"; and starring in the film "Waves," which received a great reception at the Toronto Film Festival. I caught up with Brown over the phone on his way back from the festival about returning to his role of Randall Pearson on the fourth season of "This Is Us" and the genius of the show's creator, Dan Fogelman.

"I think with every project you pick, you're hopeful," says Brown of the early days of the show. "I read this script and it was, bar none, the best network television pilot I had ever read. I knew Fogelman from 'Crazy Stupid Love.' I was like, 'Alright, this guy wrote one of my favorite romantic comedies, he's now written one of my favorite pilots. I think I'm in good hands.' I knew that it was a great pilot. I didn't know what the show was going to be, necessarily. But Dan did."

Brown and the rest of the cast were totally unaware of the life the show would take on as the first season went on. "It's not until you get two or three episodes in until you know that you have a good series. But, people were sticking with us and loving the show more and more," he says. "You shoot the first six or seven episodes before anybody ever sees anything. You're in a bit of a vacuum. Then you release it out into the world and you see how your work is affecting people. It was profound for us as performers to know that our work was touching people the way that it has been over the past few years."

The show has done something truly unique as it has become one of the most reliable emotional haymakers on network television. I ask Brown, with a laugh, if he is constantly approached by fans of the show who immediately burst into tears.

"You laugh as you say it, because I think a part of you already knows what the answer is. The answer is yes!" He laughs. "I want to say that I'm used to it, but I'm not, because I'm surprised every time it happens. But it happens a lot. It runs the gamut. People tell me, 'You made me want to call my brother,' 'You made me forgive my mother,' 'You made me want to adopt a baby.' … I'm like, 'Holy cow, take it easy!' I wasn't trying to do all of those things, necessarily. But, things that were buried under the surface of their subconscious got a chance to come to the forefront by virtue of watching the show. I think Dan and our writers have this masterful way of cracking people's souls open and giving them permission to feel everything that they want to but that they don't give themselves permission to do on a day-to-day basis. Because life is hard, and sometimes we put up these walls so we can make it through the day."

> "I think Dan and our writers have this masterful way of cracking people's souls open and giving them permission to feel everything that they want to but that they don't give themselves permission to do on a day-to-day basis."
> Sterling K. Brown

But while "This Is Us" is one of the most anticipated shows on television, Brown is also attaching his name to one of the most binge-worthy streaming shows, Amy and Dan Sherman-Palladino's razor-witted "The Marvelous Mrs. Maisel."

"Being from the theater, out of television shows that's the closest I've come to being onstage," Brown says of stepping into the fantastical world of this unique show. "Amy and Dan write these 85-, 90-page scripts that they still try to film in 60 minutes. There's pace, people are speaking at the speed of light, or at least the speed of sound. Sometimes you think you're going fast and then they'll say, 'Oh you can pace things up a little bit.' It's like, oh okay… It's awesome. It really was exhilarating. So much fun to get a chance to exercise another muscle. I got the chance to play a lot with Rachel and Alex and they're two wonderful thespians. The vibe was as familial as our vibe is on 'This Is Us.' So it was nice going from one family set to another."

In between all of these projects, Brown has become involved in the web series "Survivorship Today: What It's Like to Live With Cancer" in order to provide those living with cancer resources and testimonials from others like them.

"My uncle Sonny, my mom's younger brother, passed away in 2004 from cancer," says Brown. "He got diagnosed and about six months to the day, he expired. It was a devastating blow to our family to see how quickly it can work and lead to your demise. But, the good news is that cancer does not have to be a death sentence. People are in fact living longer with cancer today than they were in the past."

The series is in partnership with Bristol-Myers Squibb and hopes to educate those who may be living with cancer, or living with those who have been diagnosed, on the resources available to help in their fight. You can watch the entire series of "Survivorship Today" over at survivorshiptoday.com.

Boston comic Rich Gustus to make one final performance at The Boston Home

PAT KING

PROVIDED

"This Thursday, Sept. 26, the Boston comedy scene will be celebrating one of their most beloved comics, as Rich Gustus will be joined by many of his friends in comedy to help raise money and spread awareness of The Boston Home, a residence for adults with advanced multiple sclerosis and other progressive neurological disorders." This night of comedy will take place at Florian Hall in Dorchester as a Comedy Night Fundraiser for The Boston Home with some special guests from Gustus' career.

Gustus has been a fixture on the stand-up comedy scene since 1987, making numerous television appearances from the Comedy Central show "Dr. Katz, Professional Therapist," to "The Steve Katsos Show" and Conan O'Brien. He is a respected comedian and has opened up for such big names as Bill Maher, Kevin Nealon and Dennis Leary. Apart from his work in TV and on the road, Gustus has been a comedy teacher for the past 25 years.

In 2000, Gustus was diagnosed with MS. Instead of shying away from the stage, he chose to use it as an outlet to share his struggles and experiences with this disease. But as time went on, the disease made it much more difficult for Gustus to perform.

"I want to perform onstage one more time before I lose my voice to MS," Gustus said in a statement. "I am so excited to be performing again with my friends."

The star-studded show will include such famed Boston comedians as Tony V, Christine Hurley, and Artie Januario, as well as sound engineer Ed Regal.

"Rich is a legend among Boston comedians," Tony V said in a statement, of helping to organize this special night. "He opened for some of the greats. He also taught comedy workshops and classes for years. We are honored to host this fundraiser for Rich and to raise funds for The Boston Home, where he is receiving excellent care."

Christine Reilly, chief executive officer of The Boston Home, is completely thrilled by the commitment of Gustus' friends as well as to be expanding the organization's presence in the community and making sure its mission is known.

"I am so grateful to Tony V, Christine Hurley, Artie Januario and Ed Regal for donating their time and talent to the Comedy Night Fundraiser," she said in a statement. "We are all looking forward to a very special night."

This now-sold-out event will include a buffet-style dinner, a cash bar, and a raffle and live auction, all to raise funds to upgrade The Boston Home's television service system to make sure all of its residents have high-definition cable to enjoy. Some of the prizes include lunch with Mayor Marty Walsh, backstage passes to the Dropkick Murphys' St. Patrick's Day Concert, and a one-week stay at a gorgeous home in Pebble Beach, California.

If you can't attend and would like to send gifts in support, visit thebostonhome.org or send by mail to: The Boston Home, 2049 Dorchester Ave., Boston, MA 02124.

Brady is again Mr. Efficient

Brady has seven TD passes and zero picks this season.

MATT BURKE
matthew.burke@metro.us

Tom Brady has yet to throw an interception this season. GETTY IMAGES

This was supposed to be the year that the Patriots became a run-first team, and their 42-year-old G.O.A.T. quarterback reverted back to the game manager he was at the start of his New England career.

Through three weeks of the 2019 season, though, Tom Brady's having none of it.

Save for Patrick Mahomes and what could be a historic Chiefs offense, Brady and the Pats have the top passing attack in the NFL. The Patriots are averaging 311.3 passing yards per game this season, and only three other teams in the league are averaging more than 300 (Kansas City at 392.3 yards per game, the Bengals at 308.3, and the Cowboys at 302.3).

Conversely, the Pats' running game is averaging just 97.0 yards per game (21st in the NFL).

Brady is incredibly on pace to have the most efficient season of his career in 2019 as he has seven touchdowns with zero interceptions thrown so far.

Relative to his usual brilliance, Brady struggled in the turnover department last season as he threw 11 interceptions — the most he had thrown in a season since 2013. There were even three games in 2018 in which Brady threw multiple interceptions, something that had previously been Sasquatch-sighting rare.

There was one pick he threw toward the end of a 26-10 blowout loss at Detroit that many described as a "protest pick" as Brady threw up a prayer in anger. The speculation at the time was that Brady was protesting the fact that Bill Belichick had not gotten him any help in the receiver department, with Julian Edelman still serving a four game suspension for PEDs.

There was also one INT he threw against the Dolphins, in which he later admitted was his fault because Miami deployed a coverage that he hadn't seen in a decade.

And the "Brady is past his prime" brigade was out in full force the day after he threw an uncharacteristic fourth-quarter INT against the Steelers in Pittsburgh late in the year. It was arguably the worst toss of Brady's Patriots career, as he threw off his back foot while being pressured and the ball fell right into the waiting arms of Pittsburgh's Joe Haden near the goal line.

The INT woes continued in the postseason, too, as he was picked off twice against the Chiefs in the AFC title game, and once by the Rams in Super Bowl LIII.

We're only through three games this season, and the teams the Pats have beaten so far are a combined 0-9, but Brady protecting the football so well once again is a great sign for the Pats moving forward.

Edelman injury update

Patriots receiver Julian Edelman is likely to play this coming Sunday against the 3-0 Bills in Orchard Park, New York. Edelman left Sunday's game against the Jets with a rib injury but X-rays revealed that there was no break.

MATT BURKE

Brady vaguely backs released WR Brown

Tom Brady hinted Monday that he may not agree with the Patriots' decision to release Antonio Brown, telling WEEI that people are sometimes too quick to pass judgment on others.

"I do have a lot of personal feelings, none of which I really care to share," Brady said. "That's about it. It's a difficult decision. That's kind of how I feel.

"I am very optimistic. People who know me, I think know how optimistic I am and just my belief that positivity and optimism can overcome a lot of things. There's a lot of things that get in the way of that, and again, I think we're in a culture that we want to pass judgment so quickly on people. We want to disparage people so quickly. It speaks to me that a lot of people are probably hurting because when you're not feeling great, you want other people to know that. I think it becomes very emotional and again, it's a tough life. Life is not easy. Football is not easy. Evolving and growing as people is not an easy thing.

Tom Brady touched on the Antonio Brown situation Monday. GETTY IMAGES

"I [was] very different at 22 than I am now at 42. I have a lot more perspective. Life is challenging for all of us … We all go through different aspects of our life and we try to do the best we can do and we develop friendships and relationships and people that support us. Sports has a great way of bringing a lot of people together and I believe the more you care for people, the more you love people, the more you find joy in your life, the better our society is, the better our communities are, the better our teams are, the better our families are. That's how I feel."

More news involving Brown came out Monday as the receiver was ordered by a Miami judge to appear on Tuesday for a deposition. The civil lawsuit is separate from the one filed by Britney Taylor, that alleges sexual assault.

This new suit alleges that in 2018, Brown "trashed" a multimillion-dollar condominium unit he was renting.

It was also revealed Monday that Brown has re-enrolled at Central Michigan University, where he went to college from 2007 to 2009.

Aries Don't burn bridges. It's best to be on good terms with everyone, regardless of how you feel at the moment. Charm and diplomacy will lead to respect as well as future opportunities.

Taurus Look at the possibilities, but don't count on anything until you have verified the facts and put everything in place legally. Acting on impulse or an emotional whim will lead to backtracking.

Gemini Take care of your needs. Update your look, plan a social evening with friends or co-workers and show interest in what others are doing.

Cancer Finish what you start. You'll face criticism if you speak out of turn. Offer only information you have verified and make only promises you know you can keep. Put health, exercise and proper diet first.

Leo Enjoying a getaway or spending time with a loved one should be a priority. Don't give in to someone putting pressure on you. Ease your stress, don't add to it.

Virgo Challenge yourself to learn, try harder and make a difference. How you deal with past problems will determine your success. Know when to walk away.

Libra Consider what you want to do and make changes that will allow you to head in that direction. Refuse to let negativity or demanding people come between you and success.

Scorpio Show interest in others and be friendly, but don't be too forgiving or revealing. Refuse to let an emotional incident lead to a premature decision or unnecessary action. Observe and learn.

Sagittarius Play to win. Handle matters and concerns aggressively. Refuse to let anyone take charge or meddle in your affairs. Be diplomatic, but don't underestimate a rival. Romance is featured.

Capricorn If you don't make up your mind, someone will do it for you. If you are confused, ask questions, and if you want closure, confront whatever situation you face and embrace new beginnings.

Aquarius Pay closer attention to your personal finances, investments, health and legal matters. An opportunity to get ahead will depend on you having your documentation in order. Contracts look promising.

Pisces Keep your life simple, live moderately and channel your energy into something constructive. Excessive behavior will be your downfall. Make lifestyle changes that allow you to live within your means. EUGENIA LAST
